Aviwe was an invaluable asset to our team. He is a gregarious, kind and trustworthy person who loves mentoring others. He has a deep interest in personal development and is always pushing himself to learn new things, whether it's meditation or new technologies. Because we were a small team, he needed to be flexible and work across many different tools and technologies. Aviwe was always keen to learn new things and jumped at opportunities to stretch himself. He became proficient in GraphQL, Serverless AWS and NodeJS. He primarily worked on our back-end systems, but he led development of an internal web app in React, and also shipped small features onto our Flutter app. He thrives in a fairly structured environment where there are clear goals and a collaborative working style. I know that he has a bright future ahead of him at any team he joins.
